of Martinsville, and Richard H. Mann, these two matters is beginning to create something of a mystery. In some quarters the belief has been expressed that President Wilson is holding up the other two nominations in order to see what action Senators Martin and Swanson take on the five sent in so far. It has been intimated that President Wilson intends to reward Congressman Carter Glass for his efforts in behalf of the currency bill, by giving him one of the large Virginia appointments, and that in the event the Senators reject the nominated as marshal in the West, on like recommendation of Congressman Glass, in place of Thomas Burch, who has been urged by the Senators.

"Watchful Walting."

The two Virginia Senators and President Wilson seem now to have adopted a policy of "watchful waiting" in regard to Virginia patronage.

Appearances would indicate that the Senators are not mind to the receive political concessions in regard to Virginia patronage.

In the case of the North Carolina collector, considerable opposition was anticipated to the confirmation of Alston D. Watts, of Statestyille, N. C., so Senator Simmons polled the committee personally, had an executive personally,

If President Wilson holds up the other two nominations very much longer, it will force action by the Senators on the confirmation of the five men already nominated, and compet the Senators to play the next card. Should they confirm Moncure, Hamilton, Byrd and Saunders, and reject Hart, as many believe they will do, it is believed it will go a long way towards influencing President Wilson in naming the other. they will do, and influencing President Wilson in naming the other two officials.

It is understood that the Senators have received a great number of protests from the Ninth Congressional District against the nomination of Hart, asking them to withhold confirmation. The statement is freely made by the Ninth District letter writers that the turning down of Rufus Ayers, of the Ninth District, as collector, will mean the loss of a great number of votes for R. duced the salary of the male teacher for the first three years of his service from $900 to $720 a year.

Statistics of the Department of Education show that of the 9,132 students contered in the training schools for teachers in New York, Brooklyn and Jamaica for 1912-1913, only fourteen were men. In Pebruary, 1912, there were four men applicants for positions as teachers in elementary schools, and all were rejected; in September, 1912, five applicants, two accepted, in September, 1913, one applicant, accepted, in September, 1913, three applicants, there accepted.

Since the course of study in the training school for teachers extends for only two years, there are now not to exceed six men students in these schools, while there are about 2,000 women. At this rate, it is admitted by officials of the board of education, its five applicants in these schools, while there are about 2,000 women.
